"I WANT TO BE HAPPY BUT I CAN'T BE HAPPY TILL I MAKE YOU HAPPY, TOO"

Now Ed isn't much on singing, but he has been breaking out with the above ditty several times every evening for the past three or four months. At first Ella, his wife, thought it rather cute. But now it has lost its charm and happiness doesn't come, so what are they to do?

Well, at this joyous season, we invite them to come down to our office and we will tell them about their neighbors and friends who have been made happy by the nearly $80,000.00
we have recently distributed among them. The directions are simple, the cost isn't much and the results will

WASHINGTON, D. C.

From Our Correspondent

Washington, Dec. 31.—Bar Harbor
may have to wait two months or more before it gets any definite idea whether this session of Congress is going to vote it any money for additional land for its postoffice. The Treasury Department has tentatively allocated $10,000 for the purpose.
Many other Maine cities and towns,
on the federal building program waiting list, are in the same boat with Bar Harbor. They must wait and see.

Director Rood of the Budget Bureau is opposed to this session of Congress voting any money for projects on the waiting list; instead he would have the $120,000,000 appropriation recommended spent on projects already started. But his desire is not final. Congress can override him. President Hoover may want some new work started to help relieve unemployment. If the new tax bill looks like a money-raiser treasury and postoffice department officials may urge new projects this session.

Besides Bar Harbor, other Maine projects on the waiting list are:
Calais, border inspection station,
$59,000; Farmington, postoffice, $85,-
000; Houlton, postoffice work, $160,-
000; Lewiston, new postoffice, $200,- 000; Portland, marine hospital,
$220,000; Westbrook, postoffice, $85,-
000; Wilson, postoffice, $80,000.

SPORTS PROPHECY
Dempsey To Knock Out
Schmelling — Cards and Athletics To Repeat

Paste these predictions in the hat for a Happy New Year along the warfronts of sport writes Alan Gould, Associated Press sports
editor:

Jack Dempsey to knock out Max Schmelling for the world championship.

Paavo Nurmi to win the Olympic marathon in the world record time.

Ellsworth Vines to lead a victorious American campaign for the Davis Cup, notwithstanding Henri Cochet, the lone hope of France.

The Cardinals and Athletics to repeat in the major league baseball races with the Giants and Yankees
in hot pursuit.

Babe Ruth to take a $10,000 salary
cut and still bang more baseballs out of the lot than anybody else in either big league.

Army and Navy to close their athletic breach.

Cornell to regain the college rowing crown at Poughkeepsie.

Bobby Jones to consider a golfing comeback in the United States open.

FROM THE LIGHTHOUSES

Messages are still coming in from grateful lightkeepers and coast guardsmen in acknowledgment of Capt Wincapaw's Santa Claus stunt.

From Spruce Head to The Courier-
Gazette comes this word:

"We wish to thank you and Capt.
Wincapaw for the papers and magazines sent us by plane. The visit was a surprise as we had seen nothing about it in the papers. We surely appreciate your efforts to bring us Christmas cheer. May you have a bright and prosperous New Year.
Mr. and Mrs. John L. Pen Dell and
D. L. Mann and family.

A. H. Kennedy keeper of the Great Duck Island Light at Manset, writes
to The Courier-Gazette thus:

"I take this opportunity to thank you and Capt. Wincapaw for your kindness. It was a real treat for a plane to fly over our station at this time of the year, on account of high winds. We received the magazines and papers at an opportune moment, for we were all out of reading material at that time. I did not think anyone outside of a Light station, or Coast Guard station, realized what papers and magazines meant to us. We want to thank you and your paper and wish you luck and prosperity in the coming year.

Claus?"

ment than any shop in Maine of its

BEAUTIFYING MONTEPELIER'S GROUNDS

How the Community Has Lent a Hand To Helping Forward the Work of Adornment

Montpelier, the Knox Memorial at Thomaston, having completed with undoubted eclat its first year as a public shrine to that distinguished Revolutionary patriot, Major General
Henry Knox, has now gone into winter quarters and will be no more open to visitors until the return of spring in 1932. The beautiful furniture and costly draperies have been swathed in cotton cloth bags and covers, after the thrifty and most approved mangles.

Warren—Norman Lermond, Mrs.
Charles W. Robinson.
St. George—Edgar Wilson, Oscar Honkonen, Nelson Gardiner.
Brunswick—Miss Katherine Hamilton.

Too high praise cannot be given the spirit of community co-operation, shown so promptly and generously;
and in particular there is recognition of the interest exhibited by Mr. Heis-tad and his generous contribution in advice, and time.

Many of these plants are direct

At the Front and Sides of Montpelier Have Been Replanted the Huge and Ancient Shrubbery That Soften and Harmonize the Picture of House and Grounds

ner of New England housekeeping;
shutters are closed against the garish
light of day, and the premises remain safe in the hands of the custodian, Capt. Arthur J. Elliot, and the efficient night watchman, John Hanley.

When it is pointed out that 3526
visitors have registered their names
during the relatively short season since the Memorial was opened on July 25, some measure is afforded of the popularity it has immediately created in the public mind. This numbers the names actually signed upon the visitors' book and paying the usual fee, and does not include those who thronged it on dedication day, a number estimated at the time at 2000.

These visitors show registration
from nearly every State in the U.S.A.
and some from abroad. With scarcely an exception they went away with a created spirit of enthusiasm,
to which they gave open expression and which will serve to spread over every quarter of the land the story of Knox and the shrine at Thomaston raised to the memory of one of the country's great men.

This natural form of publicity should serve greatly to enlarge the company of visitors is not to be doubted. The coming year will see the show-period lengthened by fully two months over that just closed.
There should be a reasonable expectation that each succeeding year, as vacation travel into this corner of Maine is enlarged, Montpelier, now one of New England's chief objects of interest, will come in for a growingly number of visitors.

Ornamenting the Grounds
Much of the story of the successes achieved by the interior decorations of the Memorial has already been told. There remains to relate what has been done in the few weeks past in the way of equipping with shrubbery the grounds which are to lend support to the general picture.

This work was taken in hand by Miss Margaret G. Ruggles of Thomaston, with Mrs. Lois M. Creighton and Percy E. Demmons as members of her committee, to which was joined the expert services of H. Heis-tad of Rockport, who with his mechanical equipment and corps of trained workers was able in the briefest time to take up and transport, with tons of soil attached, shrubbery of large proportions which, set into the new environment, looks as if its century of growth had been in that very spot.

Through the columns of The Courier-Gazette appeal was made for contribution of shrubbery. The response was instantaneous. Citizens, proud to lend a helping hand to the beautifying of the memorial grounds, came forward with their gifts. Upon these proffers Miss Ruggles has generously drawn and something of the story connected therewith is briefly appended.

The present planting includes century-old lilacs, both purple and white, (some with last year's bird's-nests in their branches!) from the childhood home, now destroyed, of Charles Starrett, on the Cushing road; the John Creighton Farm; the homes of Oscar Honkonen and Nelson Gardiner, St. George; Nicolai Kai-honen, Western Meadows; Mrs.

descendants of those which flourished
in the Knox gardens, and others have an historical interest related to that time. It is known that a formal garden once existed at Montpelier and that Knox, like Washington and Jefferson, took great interest in sending home choice trees, with minute cultural directions.

There are yet some prepared spaces to be filled and Japanese quince and bush honeysuckle of mature growth are eagerly desired.

It is the intention of the committee to have a complete plan of the planting at the Memorial for reference, so that any contributor may see the position occupied by his tree or shrub.

Miss Margaret George Ruggles of Thomaston, Chairman of the Committee
In Charge of the Work of Ornamenting the Montpelier Grounds

Heistad and the committee, as soon as soil can be prepared for their reception.

The list of contributors of these shrubs includes:
Thomaston—Charles Starrett, Arthur J. Henry, William Simmons, Miss Alice C. George, John Creighton, Miss Lizette S. Levensaler, Mrs.
Charles A. Creighton, Mrs. Ralph
Ayers, Mrs. Ellis Copeland, Mrs.
Mary Berg, Miss Alice Oliver, Mrs.

There remains of course much more to be done whenever funds are forthcoming to carry out this purpose and necessary adornment of the Memorial grounds.

The success of what the committee, with narrow means, it is true, but with the above indicated community co-operation, has been able to achieve, will receive manifestation next spring, when these ancient and splendid shrubs blossom forth in their new and historic environment.

FROM MAINE'S GOVERNOR

New Year greetings from Gov. Wm. Tudor Gardiner to the people of Maine:

"Reports coming to me indicate a healthier situation in various lines of industry, and in some cases a material increase in payroll has resulted. This should help to turn our minds toward a more optimistic view of the industrial outlook.

"We cannot fail to be impressed with Maine's fortunate position in the agricultural, financial, industrial, business and recreational fields, when we consider conditions as they exist in many other sections.

"That every community is taking care of its individual needs for employment, is a paramount example of the diversity and Yankee ingenuity, honesty and progressiveness, and the pioneer spirit of Maine people which stand forth to bear us through strife and economic upheavals.

"It is my hope, with the closing of 1931, that we have passed through the most serious of the present depression and that as this New Year progresses, our return to normal and prosperous conditions will become more and more apparent.

"Let us look to 1932, not only with hope and courage, but look for the new opportunities which must come our way."

WITH FIRE OF YOUTH

Rotary Club Told Some Red
Hot Facts About Power
Export

Mary Coughlin Carrillo, teacher of English in the High School, brought four of her youthful debaters to the Rotary meeting yesterday and demonstrated the excellence of modern teaching methods. The youngsters discussed the question of exportation of power from every angle attempted by hardened campaigners and introduced a few bombshells charged with all the fire and ardent partisanship of youth.

William Ripley and Robert Allen vigorously championed the cause of exportation of power from Maine,
painting glowing pictures of the future under those conditions with manifold benefits accruing to the State and its inhabitants. Kenneth Orcutt and Frank Harding held very pessimistic views of a future under an exportation program, drawing dismal pictures of industrial conditions which they backed up with Maine examples. They did feel however that the Fernald Law had justified its existence and brought industries to Maine. The arguments were admirably presented and their preparation showed much research. The club voiced its approval in vigorous applause, giving Mrs. Carrillo that special hand it accords any Coughlin.

A report on the progress of the Unemployment Committee presented by Chairman H. P. Blodgett showed 60 men at work on several projects. The brook back of the High School has been straightened and widened with over 3000 loads of dirt used in filling the hollow. Rocks for the walls were obtained from Achorn cemetery where the committee is doing some clearing up. About 500 loads of rubbish were hauled away in the waterfront cleanup at the Northend.

About half of the available fund has been spent thus far and the pledges are paid promptly with but few in arrears.

In the absence of a pianist Phil
Jones volunteered to accompany himself in a baritone solo but was only half through when James J. O'Hara appeared, claiming he couldn't bear to have a piano given such abuse.

Therappon Mr. Jones presented "Call Me Darling" and "Goodnight Sweetheart" being encored again and again on the latter. George Allen of Camden was a visiting Rotarian and George B. Orcutt a guest.

ALERT CHILDREN
Helping To Make So. Thom-
aston Sunday Services
More Successful

South Thomaston children enjoyed a Christmas party and tree in the church, the event made possible by Mrs. Albert Graves, superintendent of the Sunday School, assisted wholeheartedly by members and Mrs. R. W.
Tyler. The children aided in the preparation of the ever popular popcorn bags, and in decorating the tree and church.

No formal program was presented,
but carols were sung and an impromptu entertainment was volunteered by the children, consisting of poems, readings and a musical recitation. Owing to the absence of Santa Claus, Mrs. R. W. Tyler's class of 11 girls, nine of whom were present, assisted in dismantling the very attractive tree and "passing out" the presents.

The Sunday School was the recipient of more than 100 bars of a delicious popcorn confection presented by Mrs. Flora Baum, also a check from Mrs. Lizette Emery of Rockland who, unable to be present, manifested her thoughtfulness.

Last Sunday Mrs. Tyler's class introduced the idea of the Sunday School members attending the evening service each Sunday, and by their presence, singing of hymns, giving quotations and assisting in every way possible to make the services interesting and helpful to everyone.
These services are under the direction of Charles Watts who spares no effort of his own, and wants everyone to feel it is their service as much as it is his.

Tomorrow evening the meeting is given over to the older boys, who will read Bible stories, answer questions of a Biblical nature, etc. It seems a pity that the older people of this village cannot emulate the hearty spirit of cooperation shown by the children. For with an enrollment of 60 in the Sunday School, and an average attendance of 48, there are only five teachers available each Sunday.

JANUARY BRINGS THE SNOW
January brings the snow.
Makes our feet and fingers glow.

February brings the rain.
Thaws the frozen lake again.

March brings breezes sharp and chill,
Shakes the dancing daffodil.

April brings the primrose sweet,
Scatters daisies at our feet.

May brings flocks of pretty lambs,
Sporting round their fleecy dams.

June brings tulips, lilies, roses,
Fills the children's hands with posies.

July brings thunder-showers,
Apricots and gilly-flowers.

August brings the sheaves of corn;
Then the harvest home is borne.

Warm September brings the fruit;
Sportsmen then begin to shoot.

Brown October brings the pheasant;
Then to gather nuts is pleasant.

Dull November brings the blast—
Hark! the leaves are whirling fast.

Cold December brings the sleet,
Blazing fire and Christmas treat.

COMPLIMENTS OUR HOSPITAL

Seldom is a public institution visited with a higher compliment than was this week paid the Knox County General Hospital. It comes through the operating room, and is associated with that fashionable organ, the appendix, which until the present moment had been connected with the personality of William Sharpe, the 11-year-old son of Dr. Sharpe, the distinguished New York surgeon, whose summer home is here and where William junior numbers his friends by the score. The operation itself was an affair of the smallest moment to that young patient, who participated in its ritual with the utmost cheerfulness. The thing that points the moral and adorns this tale is the fact that one of the foremost surgeons of the day, a practitioner of world-wide reputation, whose New York home is in the midst of surgeons of highly recognized ability, masters of their profession, should send his son to the Rockland Hospital for treatment—that to a down-east surgeon and a down-east institution he should elect to entrust the fortunes of his son. Well, Dr. Sharpe has had opportunity fully to appraise this hospital, the character of its administration, the superb training of its nurses and the professional skill of its surgical staff. We do not know what more sweeping endorsement the friends of the Knox County General Hospital could hope to see bestowed upon it.

THOMASTON BOY

After 50 Years' Sea Service
Retires To Puget Sound
Shore Duty

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—
Handing you this item from a western paper, sent by my friend George F. Gerry of Yakima, Wash. It will be read with interest by your older readers in Thomaston. We always called Capt. Hall "Bobbie" and "Tinker" when we were boys, and it seems strange that so many of those with whom I have spoken have forgotten him. If I remember correctly, Capt. Hall has made but one visit to his home town since he went away, so many years ago. He has a sister living in Warren.

Pardner.
Under the heading "Captain Hall ends 50-year sea service" the Seattle paper says:

Capt. Robert Hall, veteran master mariner and pilot, after fifty years of seafaring is going to retire to shore duty. He has been Puget Sound pilot for W. R. Grace & Co. since 1906. Now he will assume less strenuous duties as cargo surveyor in Seattle for the firm.

Captain Hall was born in Thomaston, Me., in 1862. At the age of 16, after working in New England shipyards, he went to sea in the sailing ship St. Charles, bound for Kobe with a cargo of case oil. Two days after her arrival in Japan the St. Charles was destroyed by fire and Captain Hall went to San Francisco in the old Pacific Mail steamship City of Peking.

Captain Hall first came to Puget Sound in 1888. He liked the Western Washington country and decided to stay here. He worked on the tug Tye and other vessels of the towing fleet and later served as master of units of the Puget Sound Tugboat Company. In 1898 Captain Hall became master of the steamship Discovery, operating between Seattle and Skagway. In 1902 he returned to tugboating and in 1906 became a pilot for Grace & Co. and the Great Northern liners Minnesota and Dakota.

Captain Hall will be succeeded as Puget Sound pilot for Grace & Co. by Capt. O. B. Lindholm, who has been master of the Grace freighter Cacique.

ARMY'S CHRISTMAS TREE

The Salvation Army hall was filled to capacity Wednesday night when 175 children attended the Army's annual Christmas tree. Besides the children a sizable audience of grown persons crowded in to witness the sight of the little ones being made happy. Each child received candy, orange, animal crackers, ice cream and a suitable gift. The Army Sunday School presented the following program previous to Santa's entry:

Opening song, congregation; prayer, Young People's Sergeant, Mrs. Shaw; song, "Welcome Christmas." Sunday School: Jack Frost's Welcome, Billy Fox; The First Christmas, Nina Townsend and Harley Simmons; Two Christmas Stockings, Annabelle Staples; instrumental quartet, "While Shepherds Watched"; Dolly's Christmas, Catherine Simmons; A Christmas Wish, Edw. Cross, Henry Cross and C. Roberts; Signs of Christmas, Madelyn McKusick; Merry Christmas, Grace Cayton; Jolly Santa Claus, Billy Fox; Christmas, nine children; Searing Santa, Mary Cayton; Little Snow Flakes, Sand Tray; Silent Night, Pantomime, eight girls; Greetings to Santa, Barbara Simmons; song, "Merry Crowd," by school.

Capt. Lewis Albee, formerly of Mt. Desert and now of Lauderdale, Fla., recently sailed from New York with a yachting party, to cruise among the South Sea Islands and to be gone until April.

The Brooks Bugler Who Was Short Of Breath

This is the story of Bugler Damon's Rendition of "I See Them On Their Winding Way," As Reproduced from Memory By Robert P. Chase, the Distinguished Bandmaster of Belfast

The admirably told story of the Fourth Maine Regiment, from the gifted pen of Mrs. Emma Burpee Wight and printed in the Nov. 26 issue of this paper, attracted widespread attention. The reader will recall out of its paragraphs the incident of the bugler with the short breath. For the purpose of what follows the paragraph is reproduced.

"There was one regimental company that came I think from Winterport. I had heard that no man in that company was less than six feet tall, and I think it was true, for they looked immense as they marched up Middle street. The leader had an old cornet which he held very high and upon which he blew vigorously. The Marching tune which he played was always the same, that old, old song, 'I see them on their winding way.' About their ranks the moonbeams play—

"The player was evidently short of breath, so he omitted the first note of each line of the music, in order to take a fresh breath. But he kept the time right up, always catching in the second note, and the soldiers had no trouble in marching to the tune, even if one note from each line was missing. It was all very funny, although the soldiers were so much in earnest that they did not mind the loss of that one note from each line."

Among those heard from in connection with Mrs. Wight's story was Robert P. Chase, of Belfast, one of Maine's leading musicians and bandmasters, who expressed his enthusiastic appreciation, and in particular dwelt upon the story of the bugler.

"It was Capt. A. D. Bean's Company F, from Brooks," he wrote, "and it had a b-flat copper bugle player. His name was Damon and he played the tune as represented in the accompanying sketch. As I read in Mrs. Wight's story the lines of 'I see them on their winding way'—I thought I had the music somewhere in my head. So I continued reading it and finally this came to me.

"I was a little boy 9 years old when the Brooks company, in 1861, marched through Belfast, with its drum corps and Damon with his bugle, and I remember today the impression that the bugler with his shortness of breath made on me, so that seventy years later I am able to write down the score.

"In my sketch the upper bar represents the melody as I recall it. The lower bar presents it as it came from Damon's bugle," with an indication of the omitted note to which Mrs. Wight alludes and which I also recall, where he took breath. I think the bugler would let the bass drum take the down beat in measures 1, 3, 5, but on the 7th his bugle would be heard all over Rockland."

Mr. Chase's sketch is herewith presented to illustrate a story that is full of interest—and in particular that, told by one youthful observer of 70 years ago, it should receive such confirmation from another youthful musician who had also retained in memory the peculiarity of the bugler from Brooks.

Mr. Chase's father was first lieutenant of Co. K, 4th Maine Regt. He writes that he takes great interest in the memorial tablet to the regiment, erected on Middle street heights, and purposes being present at its dedication on May 30 next.

INTRODUCING A NEW BANKER

Edward J. Hellier Succeeds the Late E. D. Spear As Treasurer of Rockland Savings Bank

The question as to who would become the new treasurer of Rockland Savings Bank was settled in a most admirable manner yesterday when the directors elected to that position Edward J. Hellier of 90 Talbot avenue, widely known in Northern New England as one of the most successful bond salesmen in that territory. Already well grounded in matters so intimately associated with banking Mr. Hellier will prove a worthy successor to the late Edward D. Spear, whose long career with the institution set such a high standard.

Mr. Hellier will enter upon his new duties, as soon as his successor on the staff of Bond & Goodwin is installed in his territory—perhaps a week or two.

It is a matter of much satisfaction to all concerned that the bank has been able to draft a Rockland man of Mr. Hellier's fine standing in civic and business affairs. He graduated from Rockland High School in 1896, and has been steadily on a salary since that time. He was eight years with the United States Rubber Co., covering Maine, New Hampshire and part of Massachusetts. Completing his work with that corporation he joined the staff of Maynard S. Bird & Co., later with Bond & Goodwin, and for 20 years has covered the Northern New England territory.

The field of salesmanship has naturally given him a broad knowledge of investments, and in this connection he has served as co-trustee with five banks on various trust funds. He has had large dealings with savings banks in the sale of securities.

The Rockland Savings Bank which he will now serve is one of the oldest savings institutions in this State, and enjoys today, as it always has, the reputation of being one of its most successful.

Famous Motor Cars Have
New Rockland Home—
Thomas-Nash Co.

With an estimate of 188,500 automobiles which must be replaced with new cars in the very near future in the Boston area in which Rockland is located, prospects for the 1932 sale of new automobiles in this territory are far brighter than at any time during the past few years.

This was the report brought back to Rockland by P. H. Thomas of The Thomas Nash Co. newly appointed Hudson and Essex dealer, who returned today from Boston, where he attended a private preview of new 1932 Hudson and Essex models which, he said, establish a new record for the number of advanced features.

Because of light buying during the past two years, Mr. Thomas said that the heads of Hudson selling organizations attending the meeting reported that thousands of replacements must be made in the very near future, and that as a result there are more prospective purchasers of new automobiles in this area than at any time since 1925 or 1926.

"Plans of the Hudson Motor Car Company for 1932 contain no compromises because of slack business conditions in 1931. For years a pioneer and leader in the automobile field, Hudson has expended millions of dollars in perfecting and producing the starting new 1932 Hudson and Essex cars, which will be announced to the public on January 9, the opening day of the New York Automobile Show.

SCIENTIST AND EXPLORER

Here is the latest portrait of Lieut. Commander Donald B. MacMillan, whose scientific researches in the far north have made him an outstanding figure among modern explorers. A visitor in Rockland this week Commander MacMillan was the guest of his nephew, Dr. Neil A. Fogg. Quite recovered from his recent hospital experience, the explorer is again looking for further adventures in the Northland, but just what form these will take is not known, which calls him to far corners of the country, and to his two homes—one in Freeport and one in Provincetown. Really one might say his "three" homes, for he comes with much frequency to Rockland, and this was his port of clearance and entry when he made his aerial trip to Labrador last year.

TRYING IT ON THE ALUMNI

Proved Successful For R. H. S. Boys, But Girls Not So Fortunate With "Old Grads"

The Rockland High School basketball team started the New Year right with a victory over the strong Alumni quintet 16 to 15. The local girls' outfit was not so successful, however, and they were forced to have the long, clean record of the High School broken by the Alumnae, 38 to 28.

The Flanagan played an important part in both games, as Art's shooting just about ruined the Alumni, while in the other game it was ex-Captain Alice Flanagan who did the offensive work to sink the High School lasses. Carol, for the Alumnae and Jim, John and Jud Flanagan for the Alumni were also in the thick of the battles.

The boys' game was very tight, with both teams unable to score often. The High School outfit took the lead early in the first quarter when two free throws were sunk, and later in the first period John Flanagan scored for the Alumni to tie the count. The score remained at 2 to 2 throughout the remainder of the period and was not broken until a foul shot by the Alumni put the grads ahead for a few minutes. The lead exchanged hands several times during the rest of the first half and the High School aggregation was in the lead by a 7 to 5 score as the whistle blew for hal-

time. There was very little scoring in the third quarter but in the final period both teams were able to find the basket with more success and the ball was nipped and tuck throughout. Until late in the final period the score was 13 all, but Art Flanagan shot a foul to put the High School in the lead, only to have Jud Flanagan come back to sink a basket and give his team the edge. Art retaliated with a basket that the Alumni could not reverse and the present day team went ahead and held their one point lead for victory over what will probably be one of the strongest teams they will meet this year. Flanagan and Elmer Crose scored all the points for the High School, while brilliant defensive work of McAlary was outstanding along with the Flanagan, Fowl and Parsons did stellar work for the Alumni.

The High School sextette was running along smoothly until the third period when the Alumnae shifted Alice Flanagan from guard to forward. After she had taken her post that she so faithfully held down for the High School two years, the present High School team was now in danger of winning. Miss Flanagan, along with her former mate Helen Mattson, scored many points to give their team a commanding lead. The work of the rest of the Alumnae team was also very good while Captain Edna Howard and Mrs. Sundstrom worked well for the High School.

Until the fatal third period the High School outfit was having very little trouble with the Alumnae, leading them at the end of the first quarter by a 10 to 2 score and at the half 16 to 9. In the last two periods, however, the shifting of positions by the Alumnae turned the tables and the High School was unable to stop the powerful passing and shooting attack that their opponents used.

How do you stand financially?

January 1 is an excellent time to take a financial inventory of yourself.

How do you stand? Have you got some real cash to show for the money you have received in 1931? Are you farther ahead than you were a year ago?

If you have been neglecting to put away part of your income during the past year why not make a resolution to do so in 1932. It will be a wonderful feeling next year to be able to look back on a real financial accomplishment.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—During a frustrated "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, a fashionable Chicago night club, a patron later identified as Dunn Clayton is shot and killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton, investigating, questions a voluntary witness, calling himself "Buck" Trembley. His testimony is apparently straightforward.

CHAPTER II.—Stanton had known Clayton in France during the World War, and is personally interested in the case. In Clayton's pocket he had found a note signed "Maise," making an appointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton does not believe the holdup men killed Clayton, and is inclined to suspect Trembley.

CHAPTER III.—At a Wisconsin winter camp a boisterous crowd is gathered, including Preston Brown. An apparent stranger arrives. Later, two men, driving, appear to be despoiled, though secretly, interested in the party. The stranger leaves the camp in his car, and the two men hear that Preston Brown has been accidentally killed. They follow the stranger's car, passing it. A viaduct, undergoing repairs, is out, and one of the two men removes the red lanterns, danger signals. The stranger, in his car, goes over the embankment. He is dead when found. The lanterns are replaced. In Brown's papers Clayton's name is found, and Stanton connects the two deaths. At his request he is assigned to the case, recalls the names in connection with the case, and had suspected, is Trembley. Trembley had caused Brown's death, apparently an accident, during a playful scuffle.

CHAPTER IV.—A Vermont lawyer, John Whitteless, reading of the case, goes to Wisconsin, and finds a man with an odd will had been asked to draw by a man named Turner. In the will Turner had bequeathed the interest on $250,000 to six men, Blair, Ashley, Roberts, Brown, Trembley, Clayton, and "Buck" Trembley. By the will, the income, at his death of each beneficiary, is to be divided among the rest. Turner's son is left a small income, though at the death of the survivor, the income of the will he is to inherit all. Turner dies shortly after making the will. Whitteless suspects foul play in the deaths of Clayton, Brown, and Trembley, inasmuch as their incomes are added to those of the survivors. He writes to the Chicago police, Stanton goes to Newburgh to interview Asa Burling, one of the executors of the will.

CHAPTER V.—Darling tells Stanton he believes Turner, knowing them well, wanted and expected the six beneficiaries of the will to kill one another, they having in the past injured him beyond forgiveness. This is his method of revenge. Stanton visits Turner's son. The youth is contented and happy with his small income.

Roberts on the hearth-rug, Ashley in his chair and Blair nervously pivoting on his heels or toes, looked at the lieutenant with suspense for his next words.

"That won't interest you much, if at all," the lieutenant continued, "although of course it is interesting to me. A little while ago I went out and found Pompey in my pantry. He has offended Mr. Darling by serving wine in these glasses. I asked him to do so. I asked him to take glasses which had been used for a very long time; if he had any which might convict him of bad housekeeping to use them, and to ladle them with a fish knife or some such thing on a tray without touching them. Then to fill them and bring them in."

"You see, gentlemen, if Pompey has done as I think he has these glasses contain our fingerprints. Of course they could have been obtained otherwise, but here they are."

Lieutenant Stanton pointed to the tray on the table which had the three glasses from which Blair, Ashley and Roberts had drunk.

Blair picked up two books from the table, one in each hand, and smashed the three glasses.

"There's your cheap trick," he cried. "You cheap dick! Nobody cares for finger-prints, but your ideas are son."

The lieutenant looked at him, smiling.

"I told you I was not a detective," he said, "but I should tell you that no finger-prints were found on the lanterns. No one would have looked for them, and they wouldn't have been there if they had looked."

Blair stepped toward him menacingly. "Then why did you produce this comedy?" he asked.

"Quiet yourself, Mr. Blair," said Stanton. "Your face contains a verdict of justifiable homicide for any John Law who would bump you off at this moment. The comedy was to see what false starts one or all of you would make. I've told you I was a copper and not a detective. I quite astonished myself by doing this finger-print trick. I'm a great guesser, Mr. Blair. My guess is that you took the lights away. It's probably unreasonable to ask you how you knew that Buck Trembley was at Little Butte des Morts?"

"Are you accusing me, you cheap copper?"

"Easy, Mr. Blair. I'll take advantage of that expression of yours and construe it as resting an officer. Mr. Darling is fairly primed for something more authentically western. How did you know Buck was there, Acton? You won't mind my calling you Acton? I was calling Arthur Trembley, Buck, a half-hour after he shot Dunn Clayton or had him shot."

"I haven't any time to waste with you," said Blair.

"You're not wasting it, Acton, if you are as intelligent as I think you are. You're learning that I do not think that just now it would be worth a d—n to hold you on charges and extradite you back to Wisconsin. My guess would be that no one near Little Butte des Morts or along your route could identify you, although my guess is that you know just what Buck was doing with Brown. I think you had intended to crowd him off the road and wreck him or shoot him as he made his own getaway from the lodge."

"I don't know what to do," said Roberts. "You can see my chances. It won't help if I decline to receive any more checks. I'm to be put out of the way unless I can protect myself. By G—d, I'll have them taken for a ride. There are a hundred men in New York who would do it for a thousand dollars. They'd do it for a hundred, for ten."

"I don't announce it in advance," said Stanton, "and particularly not to a police officer."

"You know why I've got to, you know it's self-defense. You know he's already murdered a man. You know they're killing us off."

"I don't know it," said Stanton. "If I did they wouldn't have walked out of the room. I'm only guessing."

"Yes, guessing. Well, I'd rather you guessed that I was alive because they were dead than that they were alive because I was dead. That's what it comes to. I can't go back to New York tonight. But how am I to know that they have gone? They may stay here in Newburgh."

"If I may use Mr. Darling's telephone, I'll loose the Dogberrys on them."

"There's the extension here on the table and there's an instrument in a closet off the hall," said Mr. Darling.

"I'll not bother you with the mysteries of police business," said the lieutenant. "I'll use the other phone."

When he returned Roberts was bracing himself with another drink of Scotch.

"They will be quietly escorted to New York," the lieutenant said, "and from then on the watchful eye will be in the middle of their backs. Now, Roberts, here we are in a case which stumps me to think of the like of it. It seems that the only thing I can do, as John Law confronted with one transparent killing and two fairly plausible ones is to wait for another."

"Will you let me stay at your hotel with you tonight?" Roberts asked. "I'll figure out something. Maybe I can go back to Chicago with you. It may not be as hopeless as I think. I might be able to get West. If I could get away from San Francisco, I might be able to disappear somewhere in the Far East, somewhere in the Pacific Islands."

He brightened perceptibly in tone and confidence of motion as he walked to and fro on the hearth-rug.

"I've got sixty thousand dollars a year now instead of thirty thousand dollars. That's right, isn't it, Mr. Darling?"

"Owing to the fact that Mr. Clayton, Mr. Brown and Mr. Trembley are no longer where they can receive checks, you are quite right, Mr. Roberts."

"Well, now, sixty thousand dollars a year is money. It gives a man freedom. He can live where it's pleasant and convenient. He can take measures to protect himself. If I can get a fair break at the start, that's all I need. Now, I know I can rely on Mr. Darling."

"We'll be leaving, Mr. Darling," said Stanton.

"Shall I see you again, Lieutenant?" the old gentleman asked, holding out his hand.

"I hope so. I must be going back tomorrow after I've gone down to New York. I've always said I was not detective, but this beats even my usual experience. I get my man! I'm nursemaid to the handsome gentleman who expects to be murdered. That's all I've got to show for my expense account. Come along, Mr. Roberts. And good day to you, Mr. Darling."

It was late dusk as Stanton and Roberts walked toward the Palatine. They passed by the Hasbrouck house.

"You might go in there a while tomorrow," said Stanton.

"Where? In there? Why?"

"It's Washington's headquarters," said Stanton.

"What of it?"

was perfect for the crew in strength, weight, rhythm and stamina, but did not try for it. It would be irrational to graduate such a man."

"Mister," said the lieutenant to Roberts when the door had been closed on Blair and Ashley, departing, "that last remark of yours was an inspiration."

"I know it was gone. H—I! I didn't seem able to hold myself. You produced Trembley's murderer here in the room, and then you let him walk out of the door. I know that pair. They'd smile at you and crack you out. You see who's next, don't you? He's here now with you, Mr. Darling. Do you mind if I take a drink? I'm needing one. I have a flask."

"Let me continue to be your host," said Mr. Darling. "Pompey will bring you and Lieutenant Stanton some Scotch. And I'll have some wine, if you please, Pompey. Don't raise the point that I already have had some. You may put another log or two on the fire. I feel a bit of excitement myself, but I'm reprobate enough to find it pleasurable."

Early dusk had begun to dim the day, and the firelight was ruddier in the room. Roberts drank his whisky straight and, with a look of request and apology at Mr. Darling, poured himself a second.

"I think we've disturbed Mr. Darling enough for the day," said the lieutenant.

"No disturbance, none whatever," said the old gentleman.

"I doubt that Pompey agrees with you. We'll get along."

"I might be told first what Mr. Roberts expects to do, not that it is properly my concern other than to see that he receives his December check."

"I don't know what to do," said Roberts. "You can see my chances. It won't help if I decline to receive any more checks. I'm to be put out of the way unless I can protect myself. By G—d, I'll have them taken for a ride. There are a hundred men in New York who would do it for a thousand dollars. They'd do it for a hundred, for ten."

A POULTRY TALK

As Placed Before Knox and Lincoln Readers By County Agent Wentworth

There is now regularly issued from the office of County Agent Ralph C. Wentworth a statement relating to the poultry situation—a subject which is of especial interest to Knox and Lincoln Counties. The current issue reads thus:

Business Outlook—(Reaches lowest level so far in this depression.) Business records in general indicate still further declines in industrial activity, according to the "Analyst." While the industries producing consumer goods, such as textiles, boots and shoes, and food, continue active, yet the basic industries such as automobiles, iron and steel, and building, continue to lag. During the past two years, the declines in the basic group have been greater than in the consumer group.

Both factory employment and payrolls declined, contrary to the usual seasonal tendencies. Payrolls have declined to a much greater degree than has employment, because of part time work and wage reductions.

In the past 12 years (except one) there has been a very definite tendency for industrial activity to average higher during the first quarter of the year than during the last quarter of the preceding year.

Supply—(Slightly fewer eggs and poultry.) The number of hens and pullets on Nov. 1 was reported to be about five per cent less than a year ago. The per cent of production, however, was somewhat heavier, 16 per cent in the East and 29 per cent in the Mid-West. This resulted in egg receipts at the four markets during November being almost as large as last year.

Dressed poultry receipts at the four markets during November were nearly five per cent less than a year ago, but about the same for the period January to December inclusive.

Live poultry receipts in New York were also about five per cent less for the period Jan. 1 to Dec. 14 inclusive, but the method of shipment varied greatly from last year. There were five per cent less freight receipts, 40 per cent less express receipts, and six per cent more truck receipts, (in terms of carloads.)

Feed Costs—(Lower than 1930; more favorable for Mid-West.) The price of all feed materials as a group declined about five per cent from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15. Commercial poultry feeds in the East declined nearly $3 a ton since Nov. 15, and are around $11 a ton, or 22 per cent less than in Dec. 1930.

It is reported that poultrymen in Ohio and Kansas are home-mixing rations for around $1 per hundred weight as compared with $1.67 last year. The result of the decline in both feed and egg prices, comparing November of this year with last year, is distinctly in favor of the Mid-West producer. There is no change in the ratio of feed costs to egg prices for the Maine producer but it is 16 per cent more favorable for the westerner.

Storage Holdings—(About one-fifth fewer eggs; slightly more poultry.) Eggs were 19 per cent less on Dec. 1 this year compared with last December, but are very closely in line with the five-year average on that date.

There is some variation in the amount of the various classes of poultry in storage. Broilers, while slightly above last year's figure, were one-sixth less than the Dec. 1, five-year average. Roasters, 14 per cent more than last year, but about the same for the five-year period. Fowl show a decrease of 28 per cent compared with last year's figure and also the five-year average.

Total poultry holdings were eight per cent more than a year ago, but about five per cent less than the five-year figure.

Storage holdings of poultry are of particular significance at this time of year as they indicate the size of one of the major sources of supply during the next spring and summer.

Prices—(Eggs in better position than poultry.) While egg prices run from 10 to 15 per cent below last year at this time, yet this may not be so unfavorable when we consider that feed costs are around 20 per cent less, and also that the general price level is about 15 per cent lower.

The market on storage eggs continued weak. Most of the demand from retail stores centered around cheap, late stored eggs that could be retailed at popular prices. Moreover, buyers generally limited purchases to small lots.

Live poultry prices are considerably under last year's quotations in New York, especially on broilers, 16 cents compared with 37 cents (Dec. 15). Boston prices are only slightly under last year.

Dressed poultry prices show more downward revision than live poultry in Boston. Turkeys held the attention in the large markets.

The town schools began Dec. 28 after a Christmas vacation of one week.

Mrs. Esther Moody, teacher in the grade school, will board at the home of Miss Bernice Beechey during the remainder of the winter term.

Earl Boynton of Boynton's Garage was a business visitor in Augusta Wednesday.

George B. Finley is at home from U. of M. for a week's vacation.

In a well played game of basketball Dec. 29 at Light's Pavilion the Alumni of Washington High defeated the High School team, the score 19-12. The entire alumni team played a bang-up game with "Bim" Overlook leading the scorers with five baskets from the floor. The High School boys put up a good game but lacked the experience of their opponents. A fair sized crowd witnessed the contest and were very enthusiastic over the game which is new to this locality.

COURIER-GAZETTE CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

As Placed Before Knox and Lincoln Readers By County Agent Wentworth

There is now regularly issued from the office of County Agent Ralph C. Wentworth a statement relating to the poultry situation—a subject which is of especial interest to Knox and Lincoln Counties. The current issue reads thus:

Business Outlook—(Reaches lowest level so far in this depression.) Business records in general indicate still further declines in industrial activity, according to the "Analyst." While the industries producing consumer goods, such as textiles, boots and shoes, and food, continue active, yet the basic industries such as automobiles, iron and steel, and building, continue to lag. During the past two years, the declines in the basic group have been greater than in the consumer group.

Both factory employment and payrolls declined, contrary to the usual seasonal tendencies. Payrolls have declined to a much greater degree than has employment, because of part time work and wage reductions.

In the past 12 years (except one) there has been a very definite tendency for industrial activity to average higher during the first quarter of the year than during the last quarter of the preceding year.

Supply—(Slightly fewer eggs and poultry.) The number of hens and pullets on Nov. 1 was reported to be about five per cent less than a year ago. The per cent of production, however, was somewhat heavier, 16 per cent in the East and 29 per cent in the Mid-West. This resulted in egg receipts at the four markets during November being almost as large as last year.

Dressed poultry receipts at the four markets during November were nearly five per cent less than a year ago, but about the same for the period January to December inclusive.

Live poultry receipts in New York were also about five per cent less for the period Jan. 1 to Dec. 14 inclusive, but the method of shipment varied greatly from last year. "ASTONISHED THE NATIVES"

Bursting Bombs and Big Bonfire Inform Excited Community That Cement Plant Won

There were high jinks at the cement plant New Year Eve, and they brought guardians of the peace a-running to see what was happening. The detonation of bursting bombs made a terrific racket, while the gloom of night was effectively dispelled by a bonfire, whose flames arose to great height from the top of the 50 foot dump on the outskirts of the plant.

Next morning there was a modest sign by the roadside which furnished its own explanation of the turbulent night. The inscription on it reads:

We Won It
Safety Trophy, 1931

This sign is illuminated at night, telling to the world that the Lawrence Portland Cement Company went through the year 1931 without a lost time accident. Eventually this sign will be replaced by a cement monument 6 feet high and five feet wide, awarded by the Portland Cement Association as a trophy to the cement plant which will complete such a successful record. Application for it has already been made. And considering that the Thomaston plant has given employment to 200 men during the past year the trophy is richly earned.

In 1928 when the company inaugurated its safety drive there were 23 lost time accidents aggregating 1505 actual days' loss of time. In 1929 there were but two lost time accidents aggregating 67 days' loss and in 1930 four lost time accidents with 324 days' loss. The clear record of 1931, without one serious accident, and no lost days is a matter of great satisfaction to the company and its employees, and particularly to the safety engineer O. E. Wishman, who has displayed great zeal in bringing about such a condition. Mr. Wishman will go to New York to accept the trophy, accompanied by Albert H. Gupitli, chief of the safety police, and another employee. The formal dedication will take place sometime in June, when the governor of the State and other dignitaries will be present.

Present New Year Eve were Plant Manager Carl H. Sonntag and other resident officials, with a number of guests—perhaps 50 all told. When quiet had again settled down over the plant, sandwiches and coffee were served.

Yesterday a telegram was received from Walter J. Brennan, State Safety Engineer, congratulating the plant on its achievement.

"The State of Maine and the Nation pay tribute today," he said, "to your marvelous safety accomplishment. In a nation of workers only an outstanding few can produce without a pitiful by-product of cripples. The boys of the Lawrence Cement Company have shown the way to other industries, because they are intelligent enough to realize safety's pricelessness. When management, supervision and crews join hands and say 'We will,' nothing is impossible of accomplishment. With every last man in possession of his limbs and faculties on Jan. 1, what is superior for the making of a Happy New Year? Carry on and congratulations."

The standards of training such as they are today for the National Guard should alone point to the fact that this bill, if allowed to pass, would be a move of false and unjust economy.

I recall that just recently the National Guard of the United States was faced with this same problem for the fiscal year of 1932, but our big brother, the Regular Army, realizing the importance of the National Guard as first line troops in case of emergency, came to our rescue by cutting down their expenditure and giving funds to carry on for this year.

I believe that this demonstration by the Regular Army will prove to you that the present bill now before the House should have your opposition. Battery E, 240th C. A. of Rockland, Me., consisting of 4 officers and 62 enlisted men, wish to convey to you that they are absolutely opposed to the proposed cutting of the army drills and encampment complement, and earnestly urge that you use every effort by word and action to the end that this pacific propaganda that tends to hinder the subject of the National Guard and the proper defense of our country be immediately exposed in no uncertain terms.

Having already heard you speak before our Lions Club here in Rockland, Me., on the general subject of Americanism, I have no doubt of your stand on this matter after you have learned the facts—hence I have written you with entire confidence.

Please accept my appreciation in advance.

Sincerely,
Richard F. Saville,
Captain, 240th C. A. H. D.
Commanding E. Battery

P. S. I shall follow this letter with petitions signed by citizens of this city.

A VIGOROUS PROTEST

Battery E Strongly Opposes Cut In the Federal Appropriation

Capt. R. F. Saville of Battery E, C. A., has sent the following letter of protest to Congressman Partridge:

I am in receipt of a letter from my commanding officer, Col. George E. Fogg, regarding the National Guard appropriation bill now before the National House of Representatives for the fiscal year of 1933.

According to the appropriation bill now before the House, the National Guard of the U. S. will be cut to 45,000 men, and will only be allowed to take 75 per cent of their organizations to the annual encampment.

If this bill is allowed, it would greatly hinder the efficiency of my organization and will also mean a loss of money to the personnel.

The number of army drills now allowed to the National Guard are hardly sufficient to obtain the objectives set forth in our training program, and only by extra drills and schools, for which the officers and enlisted men of this battery faithfully give their time without pay, can we obtain those objectives.

They are today for the National Guard should alone point to the fact that this bill, if allowed to pass, would be a move of false and unjust economy.

I recall that just recently the National Guard of the United States was faced with this same problem for the fiscal year of 1932, but our big brother, the Regular Army, realizing the importance of the National Guard as first line troops in case of emergency, came to our rescue by cutting down their expenditure and giving funds to carry on for this year.

I believe that this demonstration by the Regular Army will prove to you that the present bill now before the House should have your opposition.

Battery E, 240th C. A. of Rockland, Me., consisting of 4 officers and 62 enlisted men, wish to convey to you that they are absolutely opposed to the proposed cutting of the army drills and encampment complement, and earnestly urge that you use every effort by word and action to the end that this pacific propaganda that tends to hinder the subject of the National Guard and the proper defense of our country be immediately exposed in no uncertain terms.

Having already heard you speak before our Lions Club here in Rockland, Me., on the general subject of Americanism, I have no doubt of your stand on this matter after you have learned the facts—hence I have written you with entire confidence.

Please accept my appreciation in advance.

Sincerely,
Richard F. Saville,
Captain, 240th C. A. H. D.
Commanding E. Battery

P. S. I shall follow this letter with petitions signed by citizens of this city.

The Play Readers' Club of Belfast at a recent meeting read "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Rudolf Besier's successful play, the parts being taken by various members. Those who heard the marvelous rendering of this play by Maud Andrews Lincoln of Augusta recently under the auspices of the Methebesec Club of this city, will be interested to know that Mrs. Lincoln comes to Rockland on Tuesday afternoon to give another dramatic reading which will probably be Philip Barry's "Tomorrow and Tomorrow." This play was a close second in winning the Pulitzer prize of last year, and has won enviable success on the boards. The reading will be given in the Universalist vestry, the hour 2.30 sharp.

Mrs. Arthur F. Lamb and Mrs. Joseph Emery entertained with a "poverty" party Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Lamb on Pleasant street, the event proving one of the jolliest of the early winter season. The "poverty" idea was carried out in all respects possible—candles furnished the only light, newspapers were used as window curtains, furniture was scant and questionable, and as entertainment plain whist was played. The guests in costume presented a truly "poverty stricken" appearance. Mrs. Adelbert Miles carried off honors for the ladies in having the most original costume, and William Gray of Thomaston had the most unique men's costume. At 11.30 the guests, 18 in number, repaired to Mrs. Emery's home on Limerock street where a "poverty" luncheon was served, featuring corned beef sandwiches, pickles, sardines, soda crackers, doughnuts, cheese and coffee.

MRS. GEORGIA E. WARDWELL

Member of Camden Social Circle Who Was Native of Rockland

The death Friday morning of Mrs. Georgia E. Wardwell, 76, at the family home in Camden, marks the passing of one well-known to an earlier Rockland, her girlhood home. It was in this city that she was born, Sept. 23, 1855, elder daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Woodcock) Jones, prominent in the church and social life of that time. Her marriage to Edward J. Wardwell, native of Boston, took place Sept. 23, 1875. Mr. Wardwell was then one of the rising and successful young business men of Rochester, N. Y., and to that city he took his young bride, where for several years their home was made. In those early years was born their only son, Louis Edward Wardwell, now resident of Camden, with his wife, who was Mary Eastman Hitchcock of Rockland.

Previous to their coming to Camden Mr. and Mrs. Wardwell traveled much and enjoyed a wide association with interesting people and events. It was on retiring from active business 30 years ago that Mr. Wardwell invested in Camden real estate, and built there the two handsome houses on the Belfast Road, in one of which, Gray Rocks, the home was made and became the scene of much social entertainment, until in later months, when failing health narrowed Mrs. Wardwell's activities. She was known for the friendliness of her nature and a sustained interest in the things that give value to life, and a large company of friends in these vicinities will unite in sorrow at her death and in sympathy for the husband and the son, who survive the loss of a beautiful and affectionate wife and mother.

Funeral services are held at the home this Saturday at 11 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Witham of the Congregational Church officiating. The burial will be in Boston. Friends are desired kindly to omit flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Kenneth Hurd and Mr. and Mrs. L. Shirley Hurd of Philadelphia have returned home after spending the holidays with their parents Mr. and Mrs. George Hurd, Ash Point.

Mrs. Fred Cates entertained the Cheerful Circle Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richards and daughter Elaine entertained at supper New Year Eve, their guests being Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Merchant and daughter, Beverly, Francis, Merion, Kenneth Dailey, Mrs. Frances Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Asbra Burgess and son Everett, Mrs. Annie Mundy and daughter Meredith. Music and cards occupied the time happily, and 1932 had been ushered in before the party broke up.

The New Year's Eve ball given by the Senior and Junior Harmony Clubs has come to be a most enjoyable annual event, but that of Thursday evening went far beyond the most sanguine expectations, there being nearly 275 persons present. The younger social set, home from college for the holidays, was especially well represented. The decorations in Temple hall were simple, but very effective, consisting of streamers of red and green crepe paper from the ceiling and on the walls, and evergreen trees liberally besprinkled with tinsel placed in the corners of the hall and on the stage. The beautiful gowns of the feminine dancers—made on the long and graceful lines of the present mode and in almost every hue imaginable—made the scene a lovely one. Kirk's Orchestra furnished music. As 1931 went out and the New Year arrived proper observance was shown by all sorts of noisemakers—bells, rattles, whistles. Serpentine crepe floated through the air and the dancers donned gay paper hats. Mrs. E. F. Berry and Mrs. W. C. Noyes, counselors of the two clubs, acted as general chairmen, assisted by John G. Snow, J. M. Pomeroy, Everett Crockett and Dr. E. W. Peaslee in distributing favors. Edward Benner at the door, Misses Florence Dean, Helen Pietrosky and Ruth Dondis ladies checking room, and Frederick Palmer and Cleo Hooper men's checking room. The patronesses were Mrs. C. H. Whitmore, Mrs. O. R. Lawry, Mrs. J. M. Pomeroy, Mrs. John G. Snow, Mrs. A. R. Peterson, Mrs. E. B. Crockett, Mrs. A. R. Havener and Mrs. G. L. St. Clair.

The marriage of Merton E. Bickmore and Mrs. Ruby Comery Linscott of Swan's Island, was solemnized at 12.30 New Year's morning at the First Baptist parsonage, with Rev. J. Charles MacDonald officiating. The double ring service was used. The couple was unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Bickmore have taken an apartment at the Foss House for the winter.

Marlin Miller, who won the plaudits of London and New York in such plays as "Sally," "Sunny," "Rosalie" and "Peter Pan" will be seen Monday and Tuesday in "Her Majesty, Love." It is her third picture and her most captivating. She is first seen as a barmaid in a Berlin cabaret, later as a young girl, an unwilling baroness. Ben Lyon is the Prince Charming who rescues the twinkling coquet from her aged spouse—but that's the story. Incidental music and songs and dances spangle the gay romance. The big four of funniness are in the cast—W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin, Leon Errol and Ford Sterling—as well as many stage beauties—adv.

"A Little Clodhopper"

One of the best amateur productions that has been staged here for several years was that of "A Little Clodhopper," presented at Town hall Wednesday evening under auspices of the Trytohelp Club. It was a comedy in the truest sense of the word and with Mary Brann in the role of Judy the little clodhopper from the poorhouse and Rev. G. F. Currier as Oecy Gump, a fresh country product, the audience was kept in an uproar from start to finish. Mrs. Hazel Cain as a doing mama with a smooth cooing voice and George Crockett her son, an innocent little lamb from the city, were excellent in their parts, and Cecil Rhodes as Septimus Green a young book agent, full of pep, displayed all the qualities essential to that occupation and in the manner of a professional. Mrs. Ethel Spear as Julietta Bean, a Splendidly cooing house keeper, and Mildred Rhodes movie actress and vampire, could not be excelled in their roles. Others who assisted in the cast were Arthur K. Walker, Charles Marston, Edith Overlock, Helen Small, Thelma Spear, Carolyn Graffam. Between acts a piano duet was rendered by Mrs. Nellie Magune and Mrs. George F. Currier.

Mark's Year of Prosperity

A pleasant gathering was that at the Baptist Church Thursday evening. At 6.30 about 50 members and friends of the parish sat down to a baked bean supper served by the Trytohelp Club. A song service followed and the annual business meeting with Rev. George F. Currier as moderator. These officers were elected: Pastor, Rev. G. F. Currier; clerk, Mrs. Mildred Rhodes; treasurer, Miss Helene Dunbar; auditor, Mrs. N. J. Tribou; Sunday school superintendent, Helene Dunbar; assistant superintendent, Charles Marston; superintendent of cradle roll, Mrs. G. F. Currier; assistant, Miss Mary Brann; superintendent of Home Department, Mrs. Ella Overlock; janitor, Weston Arey; deacons, Arthur K. Many important matters pertaining to the welfare of the church and Sunday school were discussed and reports of the past year's work given by the heads of the different departments.

At 9.30 the meeting was adjourned and from that time until midnight a social time with singing, games and refreshments filled the program. On the stroke of 12 an impressive candlelight service was held representing the 12 months of the year, stressing the important dates in each month. Under the efficient leadership of Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Currier the church is showing steady progress with good attendance at all its services and

BAKED STUFFED LOBSTER

Wherein Director Crie Appeals To the Palate and Reason In Fishermen's Behalf

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

My last article about buying more lobsters was apparently read with a great deal of interest. Some people seemed to grasp the idea, and inquired about the price of lobsters—where they could get them, how they could be shipped, etc. Most retail markets seemed to respond to the idea of reducing the price and depending on volume for profit, while a few persons seemed to get the idea that the writer was trying to put them out of business, which was far from his intention.

The article if understood correctly would help everyone in the lobster business. Those merchants who grasped the true meaning of the article have sold thousands of pounds of lobsters. Of course those who were already selling at a reasonable price did not need to make any change. If every concern dealing in lobsters will follow the market and sell at a reasonable profit, there is no question about the sale of lobsters. We must cooperate and work at this particular time to help the fisherman, who gets only a limited sale for his lobsters, and then at starvation prices.

If you have never tried baked stuffed lobster here is the recipe for it: Prepare a stuffing as you would for a turkey, then place the lobster on its back and slit it from the head to the extreme end of the tail. Open, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Put about a pint of hot water in an ordinary baking pan and bake 40 minutes in a hot oven. Serve hot with melted butter and you will have a delicious dinner at a reasonable price.

When you are eating lobsters you are keeping the wolf away from the door of deserving families. Lobsters are good any day in the week, and lobsters twice each week are as cheap, now, as other foods. When the children return from school and the husband comes from his work, how they will rejoice when they inhale that appetizing lobster odor.

We told you in the last article what hardships the fishermen had to endure in order to catch lobsters under normal conditions and if they cannot find a ready market for their products, at a reasonable price, they still have to suffer a greater hardship by being compelled to go out on the ocean without sufficient clothing to keep them warm. Just think of the good you can do if you buy lobsters. By serving lobsters you are not only satisfying your own appetite but you are doing a real deed of charity. This is the year of all others when you can afford to eat lobsters because they are cheap as almost any kind of food.

If everyone who handles lobsters will sell at a reasonable profit it will surely help the fishermen through one of the hardest winters they have ever experienced.

Director of Sea and Shore Fisheries

ACTUALLY HAPPENED

One of West Rockport's most popular citizens desired to take out a hunting license, but was not very well acquainted with the procedure. He entered one establishment and when the lady asked his errand he made his want known and he was somewhat shocked when she replied: "I can't give you a hunting license, but I can give you a death certificate."

OUR HOME SERVICE COLUMN

(By Florence Foreman Ellis of the Home Service Department of the Central Maine Power Company)

Electrical Suppression Causes Trouble in Homes

The other day we encountered a friend who had received a de luxe coffee service for Christmas and had no place in the living room to attach it. Another friend, knowing of the coffee service, had given her some quaint demi tasse coffee cups and that ended that matter. Coffee simply had to be served in the living room. She had an idea that an extra outlet would cost almost as much as the coffee service itself and was agreeably surprised when she learned that in about two hours time and at the price of a good pair of gloves she could have an outlet for the coffee service suppression.

We all want to be as economical as possible but we also hear much about false economy. If our friends or family think enough of us to present us with lovely gifts to make our home more attractive and to assure our guests of a broader hospitality, it's up to us to use those gifts to their best advantage.

Light sockets were made for lights and when we attach a flat iron to a socket and pull and push it over about 12 miles of space at every ironing we aren't being economical about anything. There should be a convenience outlet for such a purpose. If one owns an electric range this outlet is connected to the power meter and the cost of current is considerably reduced.

Life would be much simpler and more lovely if when we had dinner or supper in our living rooms we weren't forced to remove bulbs from the reading lamps in order to attach a toaster or a percolator. None of us likes unsightly cords trailing from the ceiling or wall brackets.

If we are confronted with the disadvantage of not getting full use out of our electrical equipment because we have no really convenient way of plugging them in, we will be wise if we own our homes, to have a few outlets installed. They are much cheaper when done by twos. This not only helps the unemployment situation and sends us a little farther along the road to prosperity but adds appreciably to the property value and eliminates considerable wear and tear on our nervous systems when we do want to entertain properly and graciously.

THE REALM OF MUSIC

Gladys St. Clair Morgan

Happy New Year!

A recent letter from Ogarita Rose

Rugg encloses a program of a unique affair held in the exquisite ball room of the Waldorf Astoria. Known as "The Diaz Wednesday Afternoon," this of Dec. 2 was an "Oriental Program," the artists Queenie Mario, soprano; Marie Von Essen, mezzo soprano; Frances Blaisdell, flutist; Yeichi Nimura, Oriental dancer, and Rafaelo Diaz, tenor. Such numbers as were presented: Song of India by Rimsky-Korsakov, Tam-bourine by Hasse, a scene from L'Oracolo (Chinese opera), two arias from Madame Butterfly, a Japanese melody called "The Pluttering Dove," and so on. The dances were marvelous, says Mrs. Rugg, and all the scenes very effective. I read a complimentary account of the affair in the Musical Courier.

Mrs. Rugg also wrote: "The new opera 'Schwanda' is fascinating—the music and pantomime fitting together perfectly, and the broad range, particularly of the scene in Hade was greatly enjoyed by all. I heard Jeritza sing superbly in 'The Girl of the Golden West,' last week, but I must say Martinelli as an American cowboy was not very convincing. Jeritza has been so off-her lately in many of her programs that I was delighted to hear a fine performance, vocally as well as dramatically."

Those who heard Rachmaninoff in Portland give such glowing account that it surprises us to read in a criticism of his New York concert of Dec. 12 that "Sergei Rachmaninoff, usually among the most reliable of pianists, was not at the top of his form at the Saturday matinee which saw him play rather erratically a program of poorly judged content and construction. When he made up his list, Rachmaninoff must have been in a Ballade mood, for five of them in succession began the proceedings of the afternoon, Grieg's opus heading the quintet. . . In all the Ballades the performer showed tendencies new in him, to exaggerate minor bits, maintain unyielding rhythm, and indulge in extraneous gestures not formerly associated with his way of playing. It seems strange for Rachmaninoff to cultivate such mannerisms and to hear him prolong pauses unduly, and wave and wave his wrists and arms about in the fashion of the Delarte school of pianists."

Meyer Davis, orchestra leader, plays often at the homes of the wealthy and of some of their owners he has told musical peculiarities, an account of which has appeared in the New York World-Telegram. Calvin Coolidge at intimate parties sometimes gives excellent imitations of railroad whistles on a small harmonica.

A. Atwater Kent, the radio magnate, uses ninety-piece orchestras at his parties. This is probably the largest dance orchestra ever assembled.

Warren G. Harding's favorite piece was La Paloma, and Washington society used that number almost as its theme song during his stay at the White House.

Edward Prince of Wales, enjoys huge parties. He loves say and boisterous music. Often during a party he will take the drums. Not a very good drummer, but his sense of rhythm is grand. Asked once why he preferred loud and swift music, he said: "It's real and living. Soft music is pretty, but it's obsequious, and I've had too much of that business."

Clarence Mackay entertains the most lavishly. He abhors loud music, particularly the Harlem variety. Likes soft string music and harp and violin solos. However, when he entertained the Prince of Wales, he found out he liked noise, and grimly ordered the musicians to play that type.

Henry Ford is very fond of old-fashioned jigs and barn dance music. When he entertained the Prince of Wales, he ordered that type of music, and the Prince thought someone was playing a joke on him. "It's very Russian, isn't it?" he remarked.

The late Nicholas Longworth entertained his guests with violin solos of classical music. (He took lessons from Leopold Auer).

Edward T. Stotesbury is fond of gay parties and modern dance music. He was a drummer in the Civil War, and usually does a turn with the sticks for his guests.

Henry O. Havemeyer, the sugar king, wants no brass music at his parties. In place of brass he demands harmoniums (miniature organs) and they're not as bad as the name sounds.

Contrary to popular belief, Otto Kahn does not like crowds. He may never miss an opening or an important society or sporting event, but when he gives a party himself, it's always an intimate one. The fifteen or sixteen guests are entertained by the finest talent money can buy.

Cecil Fanning, baritone and composer, died in Columbus, Ohio, of heart disease on Dec. 7. He was the author of several song lyrics, and the composer of many cantatas. Many of the former devotees of the Maine Music Festivals will recall him as soloist for Mr. Chapman two or three times. He had a fine rich voice which he used particularly well in descriptive music. I recall the shock I received the first time I heard Mr. Fanning speak. He had such a sturdy rich singing voice, I imagined his speaking voice to be similar. Imagine my surprise when I heard him talking in a high-pitched effeminate voice.

Carnegie Hall uses women ushers. Among them, Marion Reese of New York, is a pianist. Ann Lee Graham, of Brooklyn, sings and dances. Margaret Hensel, of Albany, also sings, and Mabel Berryman, of Portland, Maine, accompanies her own songs in which she first set the example to fellow-student ushers.

Germany reports a child prodigy, the first one in the Berlin musical world for many years. Recently a very small girl played before an invited audience of critics, some of whom have compared her to Mozart at a similar age. Ruth Slenczynski is six. It takes her some time to climb onto the piano stool, but when once safely there she displays talent that fills her hearers with amazement. Her program comprised Bach's "Italian Concerto," Scarlatti-Tausig's "Pastorale and Capriccio," and pieces by Beethoven, Schubert, and Chopin. The depth of feeling she puts into the serious passages, and the rhythmic animation of lighter movements, made a great impression on her audience.

Results of the fifth Atwater Kent radio audition contest have been announced.

First prize winners—Saida Knox, contralto, Kearney, N. J., and J. Alden Atkins, basso, Somerville, Mass.; $5000 and two years' tuition at an American conservatory.

Second prize—Thelma Gaskin, coloratura soprano, Orlando, Fla., and Eugene Byron Morgan, bass-baritone, Painesville, Ohio, $3000 cash and one year's tuition.

Third prize—Lavin Graham Holden, contralto, Pittsburg, Kan., and Austin S. Butner, dramatic baritone, who is blind, of Nashville, Tenn., $2000 in cash and one year's tuition.

Fourth prize—Lillian Meyer, dramatic soprano, Jamestown, N. D., and John B. Metcalf, baritone, Austin, Texas, $1500 in cash and one year's tuition.

Fifth prize—Eleanor Corvill, coloratura soprano, Santa Cruz, Calif., and Andrew White, bass baritone, Tucson, Ariz., $1000 and one year's tuition.

Not a tenor among them—why, do you suppose? . . .

We see that—The opera "Norma" celebrated its 100th birthday on Dec. 26. Bellini's work was first produced at La Scala on Dec. 26, 1831, and Gatti Casazza commemorated the event with a Metropolitan production on the same day with Rosa Ponselle singing the title role.

Ignace Paderewski has expressed the wish to give a series of concerts for the benefit of the unemployed during his coming visit to the United States. George Engles, his manager, announces that the first of these is to take place in Washington, D. C., on Jan. 25, under the auspices of Mrs. Herbert Hoover. Proceeds of these concerts will be turned over to the Emergency Committee for Unemployment Relief.

Dan Beedoe, veteran tenor, who was a favorite in Maine Music Festivals of yesterday, was soloist in the presentation of Handel's Messiah on Dec. 29 by the Oratorio Society of New York.

The critics were none too kind to Fritz Kreisler after his New York concert on Dec. 11—they said "One of the musical giants, Fritz Kreisler, is losing stature. His concert displayed much careless and inconsequential violin playing."

Arturo Toscanini has sailed abroad to try to cure the neuritis which afflicts his right arm. . . .

The mail order sale of seats for the impending Boston-Chicago Opera season is now open and continues to Jan. 9. Orders may be sent for seats for one or more performances to the headquarters of the Boston Chicago Opera Association at 234 Boylston street, room 601. The repertory is:

Trip-a-Day Tales

Gardens By Steel Highways
Gardens by lanes and country roads, yes, but in Sweden some of the loveliest are beside the railway tracks. Every station along the electrified trunk line between Gothenburg and Stockholm looks more like a botanical exhibit than a railway depot. Thousands of roses bloom by the well kept lawns, tall lilacs and taller sunflowers nod to the passengers as they pass. They are all planted by the State Railway administration which hires horticulturalists to develop the gardens. In one year as many as five thousand fruit trees and bushes were planted and today the railway company is the largest garden owner in Sweden with a quarter of a million plants under its care. Honey and birds grow sweet and happy all along the line.
